Rothesay becomes first insurer to partner with The Female Forum's Pension Chapter

The Female Forum, a dynamic network dedicated to empowering professional women and advancing gender equality, is thrilled to announce the addition of Rothesay, a leading UK pensions insurance specialist, as the first insurer to join its Pension Chapter as a corporate partner.

The Pension Chapter, a ground-breaking initiative under The Female Forum's umbrella, is designed to serve as a strategic network for female professionals within the pensions industry.

By joining the Chapter, Rothesay will participate in its quarterly thematic industry roundtable events, allowing women leaders in the business to engage with their sector peers in intimate and collaborative discussions on industry-specific themes.

Other leading pensions businesses supporting the Chapter include LCP, Sackers and Janus Henderson Investors.

Speaking about Rothesay's participation, Founder and CEO of The Female Forum, Nora Stolz, expressed her enthusiasm for this partnership, stating: "Our purpose at The Female Forum is to create a professional world that female leaders can believe in and where they can thrive. The addition of Rothesay as a corporate partner brings a wealth of knowledge and experience, contributing to the diversity of thought within The Pension Chapter."

Rhonda Moon, COO of NGUKPS Trustee Executive Ltd and Pension Chapter Lead commented: "We are very excited Rothesay is joining The Finance Chapter as the first insurance partner. Rothesay is adding key industry insights and perspective to the existing high calibre list of partners. With an expertise in providing insurance solutions across the pensions industry we look forward to interesting discussions and input, particularly in the light of schemes' plans to secure member benefits into the future."

Cleo Taylor Smith, Business Development at Rothesay said: "Rothesay is committed to promoting equality and diversity and we are delighted to partner with this network dedicated to empowering women and advancing gender equality. We look forward to working with The Female Forum and our fellow corporate partners to create an inclusive community for women across the pensions industry."
